

Paris Musées Actualités

Two iconic Parisian venues are reopening their doors to the public, accompanied by a rich program of exhibitions.

Catacombs of Paris

The Catacombs of Paris reopened to the public in early April, once again offering visitors the opportunity to explore this unique underground site, steeped in history and deeply rooted in the capital's heritage. This unusual route, which attracts large numbers of visitors every year, provides a fascinating immersion into the former stone quarries transformed into an ossuary at the end of the 18th century. A singular experience combining history, culture, and sensory discovery in the heart of underground Paris.

Musée de la Vie romantique

The Musée de la Vie romantique reopened to the public on February 14. Located in a charming house with a garden at the foot of Montmartre hill, it invites visitors to immerse themselves in the artistic and literary world of the 19th century. Visitors can discover artworks, objects, and memorabilia linked to iconic figures such as George Sand, all within an intimate and historic setting. The museum is appreciated for its peaceful atmosphere and preserved character, offering a timeless escape in the heart of the city.
